

Legal Problem-Oriented Databases

E.V. Burtseva, A.V. Seleznev

Tambov State Technical University, Tambov

Key word and phrases: designing of databases; information technology; the expert in computer science and law.

Abstract: The paper grounds the need for the preparation of specialists of a new type – the expert in computer science and law – possessing professional skills in the field of new information technologies and able to create legal information systems. The features of designing the problem-oriented databases which can be widely used for data support of legal establishments are considered.