

Problems and Prospects of Preparation of Future Officers to the Use of Information Technology in the Decision-Making Process

E. V. Bogomolova, E. I. Plotnikova

Ryazan State University named for S.A. Yessenin, Ryazan, Russia

Keywords: decision making; information technology; personality of an officer trainee.

Abstract: The article considers the basic contradiction between the new demands of society and the army to the identity of the officer who are able to apply information technology to managerial decision-making and insufficient level of training to the cadets. It is noted that the resolution of this conflict is possible in the organization of the purposeful formation of students' competencies in using information technologies in decision-making the basis of competence and preimage approaches, applications, network, cluster, virtual, remote learning models, the use of professionally-oriented tasks and tasks with a context for decision-making, job with the research with giving.