

Foundations of Teacher Training for Teaching a Second Foreign Language at Secondary School

O. V. Usacheva

G.R. Derzhavin Tambov State University, Tambov, Russia

Keywords: foreign communicative competence; reflection of the educational process; organizational and managerial activity; teacher; training; student.

Abstract: Due to the fact that the specificity of teaching a second language is based on the compression of the organization of the educational process and optimization of the teaching time, the role of the teacher in the student's learning process changes. It is important to organize interaction and cooperation in the group, which makes it possible to give the educational process a practical focus. Therefore, appropriate preparation of the teacher for teaching a second foreign language is necessary. It is important to shape the student's ability to model his activities, oriented to a constant appeal to the future profession, that is, to develop the ability to apply knowledge in a real life situation.