

Translators' Training in the System of Higher Professional Education

O. V. Usacheva

G. R. Derzhavin Tambov State University, Tambov, Russia

Keywords: foreign language communicative competence; educational process; organizational and managerial competence; translator; teacher; reflection on the educational process; student.

Abstract: In order to form communicative competence in translators so that they can communicate in the language being studied, the modern teacher must learn to manage students' educational activities from the position of interpersonal relations. It is organizational and managerial competence that should contribute to the quality of the translators' training.